

Sweden Faces Heavy Costs In Spy Case

STOCKHOLM, June 30

UPI.—Damage caused by Air Force Col. Sig Wennerstrom's 15 years' spying for the Soviet Union may cost the Swedish government $200 million to repair, informed sources said today.

The sources estimated the damage on the basis of what it would cost to relocate secret airfields, radar installations and other apparatus for Sweden's defense, now feared hopelessly compromised.

Col. Wennerstrom pleaded guilty at a preliminary hearing last week to selling defense secrets to the Russians since 1948. He is at present jailed in criminal police headquarters pending trial.
